

Is U.S. investment in Africa coming too late to counter China and Russia on the continent?

President Biden is returning from the first presidential trip to Africa in more than a decade. Biden visited Angola to further U.S. investments on the continent. The Americans are playing a game of catchup with the Chinese who have spent decades, and billions, investing, extracting and, some say, exploiting developing countries. Amna Nawaz discussed more with Mvemba Phezo Dizolele. PBS News.

With Visit to Angola, Biden Claims the US Is 'All in on Africa'

It's finally happening: A U.S. president is visiting a country in sub-Saharan Africa for the first time in 11 years. President Joe Biden's arrival in Angola comes two years after the second U.S.-Africa Leaders' Summit in December 2022 – which also suffered from a long hiatus, with the first having been held eight years prior. Keen to express that these delays were some sort of anomaly, at the summit Biden proclaimed that the United States was “all in on Africa.” Does this visit bear out his proclamation?
