Co-operation the way forward: The case of China and Zimbabwe

THE world today stands at a crossroads. While the global economy grapples with sluggish growth, rising protectionism and geopolitical uncertainties, the need to craft an integrated economic landscape has never been more urgent. China and Zimbabwe, as steadfast partners, share a profound conviction: multi-lateralism and win-win co-operation are the only pathways to industrialisation and sustainable prosperity. This conviction is not theoretical — it is rooted in our shared history and etched into the DNA of our bilateral relations, which have withstood the test of time for 45 glorious years.
